Can Money Buy Happiness?

“God Bless!” “Thank The Lord!” these are some of the things you will hear after giving a homeless person money. Even the smallest amount of money you give someone will bring people on the streets, or in a nice home, happiness. Money does bring people happiness because those who are very wealthy do not have to stress about money and also get to enjoy easier jobs.

Worrying about money causes an extreme amount of stress, whether a person is rich or poor. Unless you have an abundant amount of money, such as Bill Gates, or other billionaires, money will cause stress. Even the upper part of the middle class have to worry about paying the bills. Money will allow you to relax and not worry about stressing over your bills. For the poor, stress has a completely new meaning. They have to wake up wondering when their next meal will come from. They do not wake up every morning in a bed or worry about retirement funds. They live day to day trying to find food and water.

Not having a high paying job means having a harder job. Most of the people who are in lower class in America have tough jobs including manual labor in the hot outdoors. (Pewresearch) says Fifty Five percent of the people in America that earn minimum wage have jobs that involve manual labor. Having a high salary job most likely will allow yourself to be working in a beautiful, luxuries office. Money will allow your workplace area to drastically improve.

Some people argue that others over their economical standard are still not happy with their career. The reason why this is, is because the desire for money is endless. Money will temporarily bring you happiness, once the money runs out the desire becomes greater. Those who have billions do not stop trying to make more. They just keep their business booming and the profits rising. Why do they do this, for their future, they already have enough money to last a lifetime living in luxury. So, they think about their children, they try to set them up for success by creating opportunities to attend outstanding colleges and have the best chance for success.

Whether you are homeless, wealthy, or a family man, money will bring your life and other relatives happiness. It allows you to live an easier life with luxuries such as vacations, health care, and top quality items. For those less fortunate money will just give you basic necessities to live. If you are unhappy it is most likely because you are in need of money.
